

DEMO DATA - not a real study.

A six-month retrospective of one product team after it adopted an AI coding assistant.
The team found no measurable change in routine task completion time.

Developers said time saved on typing was spent reviewing and correcting suggestions. Satisfaction with the assistant declined by month six as the novelty wore off.